DiscussIT Topic 6: Where is our country headed?

Discuss IT Topic: Over the last week, our country has had growing concerns on immigration bans, border safety, and executive orders that remind us of issues that have been plaguing our country for years. Now that Trump has been elected President, there has been people threatening to blow up the White House, human right protests, and a plethora of other sensitive subject matters that are very compelling to individual groups of people. Why have these issues come up now as we head into a time in which it seems no one is going to be happy with the outcomes? Will this create a split in this country and place citizens against one another when it comes to their views? In your opinion, what other topics are at the forefront of concern? Explain...

Response: Please make sure all grammar, spelling, indentation, and punctuation is correct.

These issues haven't necessarily came up now, it's more of an excuse to protest, loot and riot because of our new president Donald Trump. It's great that us as Americans have the freedom to protest on matters we don't really believe in, but you don't protest and riot for no reason. Now a days, if a person with 100k+ followers on Facebook or Instagram protest and are against a subject, people seem to "monkey see monkey do" in times like this. I 100% support protesting, it's amazing how this country has the right, but don't do it if you don't know the reason. I think this country right now doesn't know what to believe in. the country isn't divided in a physical way, but more of a stand point way. It started with Trump vs. Hilary, but when certain individuals don't know how to put up with it, they find a way to critique Trump in every single way possible whether something in his past or present, they will find something to pick on Trump for. Instead of thinking of trump as a negative politician in this country, we should prepare for all the positive outcomes that this country will have. The president can't just do whatever he wants, there are hundreds of members of congress and the senate, that block out most of the things the guy does. So no America will not go into an Apocalypse over Trump being president.
